Keeping land in the family

November 17th | 1-2PM

with Ebonie Alexander, Executive Director of the Black Family Land Trust and David Gogal, Principal at Blankingship & Keith, P.C.

Family owned land has many social, economic, and conservation benefits. It can be a family's most valuable asset. However, land owned by multiple family members and generations is more at risk of being lost due to sale or partition.

This webinar will review what heirs property is, how you become an heir, what resources you and your family need to make the best decisions about your land, the basics of the new Uniform Partition of Heirs Property Act and what it means for you and your family.

Have you inherited property? Do you own property in common with family members?
